

Procor - A Global Community Promoting Cardiovascular Health - www.procor.org

ProCor is global network that promotes cardiovascular health and the prevention of cardiovascular disease in developing countries and other low-resource settings. ProCor uses low-cost communication technologies to provide people in clinical, community, research, advocacy, and policy settings with information to enable the sharing of insights, ideas, and experiences among a global community. Free daily email updates deliver the latest developments in clinical practice, advocacy & policy, and community interventions to members of ProCor's email network. ProCor's online repository of CVD-prevention topics is integrated with the email content, bridging the communication gap between people lacking access to the web and people whose knowledge-sharing is primarily online.

For more information on this great international email and web-based resource, on accessing relevant publications and on joining online discussions, please go to www.procor.org!
